Master of Arts in Political Science (MAPS)

Background

The Central Department of Political Science (CDPS) has been serving as a leading institution for the development of political science in Nepal since last seven decades. As a lead organization, its contribution is immense in several fields, i.e. (a) designing and periodical revision of political science syllabus at all levels (undergraduate, graduate, post-graduate, MPhil-PhD), (b) knowledge production through research, seminar, and publication, (c) imparting discipline-specific knowledge to postgraduate, MPhil and PhD students, and (d) formal and informal networking/collaboration with national and international research-based organizations both at individual capacity of faculty members and institutional level.

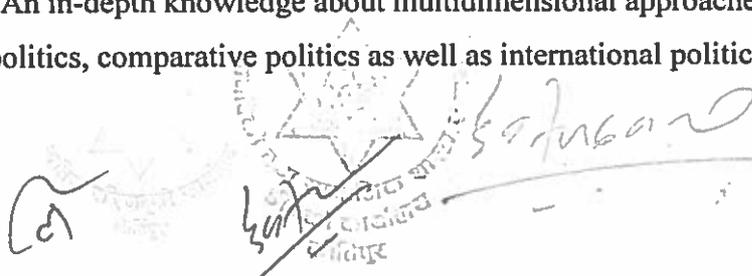

Located at Kirtipur, Kathmandu within the premise of the Central Campus of Tribhuvan University, the CDPS with its competent faculty members has been providing quality education in the political science discipline. It has produced hundreds of PhDs. It has earned the credit of being an institution that has produced competent human resources in academia, bureaucracy, political parties, and different spheres of public life. Scholars, leaders, policymakers, and key executive authorities are the advent of this journey.

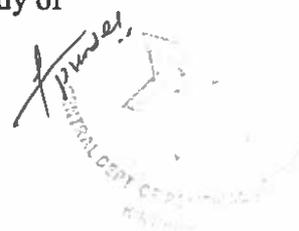

Nevertheless, a confession is that being primarily a teaching faculty at the CDPS, it is time to go beyond the classroom activities. For this, it would require a backup of research culture with teaching-learning and impartment of the faculties and students with theoretical as well as empirical knowledge. In turn, there will be an exploration of a 'political worldview'. The CDPS would like to welcome all stakeholders in making its academic efforts a grand success and expects their support in uplifting and making the process of teaching-learning-research more scientific.

Master's in Arts (MA) Program

Political Science as a master discipline of social science in Nepal has contributed significantly to the academic, administrative, and political spheres. Given all these facts, CDPS has offered this course of MA in Political Science (MAPS). The MAPS is one of the major disciplines of the Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences at Tribhuvan University. It has provided a reputed postgraduate program that is dedicated to developing qualified students knowing theories and practices in the political field. The MAPS is a semester program in which every semester is six months. This program has been launched since 2014. The interdisciplinary approach of this program tends to provide theoretical knowledge of political science in general and an understanding of Nepalese politics and the political system in particular. This program offers:

- An opportunity to get theoretical and practical knowledge about different subjectsof political science.
- An in-depth knowledge about multidimensional approaches to the study of politics, comparative politics as well as international politics.

- Various methods of research including qualitative and quantitative techniques in general and their application in the study of people, society and state.

Entry requirements

The students opting to get MAPS degree must hold at least Bachelor's Degree (in any subject) from TU and any other University around the world. But the students have to pass the entrance examination, conducted by the university.

Medium of Teaching-Learning

English is the preferred medium of teaching and learning. They are encouraged to develop skills in presentation, writing, and research in the English language. Mixed language, including Nepali and English, can also be used for in-depth clarifications and explorations during the teaching-learning process.

Mode of classes

With the execution of this course, physical classes with the attendance of respective faculty and students are only allowed. Online classes and other modes of teaching shall not be allowed in any cases unless the TU officially allows such provision for immediate circumstances.

Course requirements

As per the TU rules, 75 percent attendance of all the credit hours is compulsory in each subject. The students failing to fulfill this precondition will not be qualified to sit in the final examination. Students are also required to submit their assigned papers and thesis in the given time.

Expected outcomes

After the accomplishment of the MAPS, the students will have detailed theoretical and critical knowledge about the various sub-disciplines of political science. They will be able to analyze contemporary issues related to political theories, domestic politics, comparative politics, and international relations. The students will be able to conduct research in the political field. They will also know about Nepalese politics, politics of different regions in an international context, public administration, governance, and foreign policy.

Examination

Out of the 100 marks in each subject, 40 percent is allocated for internal assessment. It includes primarily four components: class attendance, discipline and performance, paper presentation, and term examination. The remaining 60 percent is allocated for the final examination. It will be conducted as an external evaluation in each of the subjects in each semester. The measurement of grading for both types of evaluation will be based on the following criteria.

SN	Types of Evaluation	Weightage / value
1	Internal assessment or evaluation	40%
	a. Attendance	5
	b. Paper presentation or article writing or book review	5
	d. Term examination	30
	Pass Marks in Internal evaluation	60%
2	Final semester examination	60%
	Pass Marks	50%
Total		100%

Assignments and Model of Questions

The assignments given for internal evaluation (40%) may vary in terms of content and structure. However, they should follow the principle of scholarly writing with an academic tone and scientific method of evidence, neutrality, and arguments.

The model of questions for the end-semester written examination (60%) will be based on the defined format as given in the Annex-1. It requires an analytical and critical style of writing from the students exploring the research problem or course content.

The image shows several handwritten signatures and official stamps. On the left, there is a circular stamp of the Government of Karnataka with a star in the center, and a signature below it. In the middle, there is a large handwritten signature that appears to be 'S. S. Srinivasan' with a date '10/10/2020' written below it. On the right, there is a rectangular stamp that reads 'CENTRAL DEPT. OF EDUCATION' and 'GOVT. OF KARNATAKA'. Below this stamp, there is another signature and a smaller circular stamp.
