Experience Shared by Shreya Gaire (A BSC.CSIT Student)

Choosing the right academic path can feel overwhelming, especially when the road ahead is unclear. I am a student who chose Bio-Science in Grades 11 and 12, simply because I had no interest in computer science. I had studied it during school, but my only goal back then was just to pass the subject not to pursue it. But life has a funny way of changing plans. Today, I am a proud B.Sc. CSIT student at Birendra Multiple Campus, walking a path I never imagined but now cherish deeply. This is my story, a story of confusion, discovery, courage, and transformation.

After completing my +2 in Bio-Science, I explored almost every medical field. But none of them felt right for me. I was lost, unsure, and unwilling to commit to something I didn't love. So, I decided to take a year gap to truly understand myself, my interests, and what I wanted to build a career in. That year changed everything. I counseled with my seniors and relatives who are already working and studying IT, and their guidance helped me see the vast potential of the field. The opportunities in the tech field are limitless, with demand growing across almost every industry worldwide, flexibility to work from anywhere, and the skills in this industry being sought globally, I decided to pursue a career in IT.

Starting classes was another challenge. The first time I walked into my CSIT classroom, I noticed something striking only 12 girls among 72 students. I felt overwhelmed. Did I make a mistake? Do I really belong here? These thoughts haunted me for weeks. Being a girl in tech, I faced stereotypes and questions like, "Why didn't you choose nursing or another medical field?" or "IT is for boys." Sometimes these doubts weren't just from others they came from within me too. But I didn't give up. I kept learning, one step at a time. I reached out to seniors, asked questions without hesitation, and sought help from my teachers. I also joined the Birendra IT Club, which became a turning point. Through the club, I attended workshops, seminars, and IT events not only within the campus but also across Chitwan. These experiences exposed me to the real IT world what skills are in demand, how the industry works, and what employers look for.

I also had the opportunity to connect with individuals already working in the industry. While I had doubts in the beginning, I can now confidently say that I have learned a lot and developed into someone who continuously strives to grow and learn. The field of IT no longer scares me, and with the mindset I have now, I feel I have the potential for a great career ahead. Of course, there will be a lot of learning and challenges, but with the support I receive from my teachers and the people around me, I feel ready to face them.

At the time of writing this article, I'm a student in the fourth semester of the CSIT program. When I look back, I smile at how far I've come. From a student who barely understood what IT was, to someone who can now discuss programming concepts, build basic projects, and even help others with their doubts I've transformed, and I'm still growing. What made this possible? The support system at Birendra Multiple Campus. Every teacher here not only teaches the syllabus but also encourages personal growth. They treat students equally, motivate us to take part in real-world events, and push us to believe in our potential. The positive learning environment at the campus is something I will always be thankful for. Of course, challenges still exist. The IT field is vast and always changing. But now, instead of fear, I feel excitement. I'm no longer afraid of coding errors or complex algorithms. I see them as opportunities to learn. With the mindset I've developed and the guidance I continue to receive, I feel confident about my future in IT. I may not have achieved something big yet, but I know I'm on the right track. My journey from Bio-Science to B.Sc. CSIT was not planned. It was born out of curiosity, shaped by courage, and supported by an incredible community at Birendra Multiple Campus. I faced doubts, fears, and social stereotypes, but I kept going and today, I'm proud of myself for choosing a path that once scared me. Being a CSIT student is more than just learning computers; it's about adapting, growing, and believing in your ability to solve. The world needs your ideas, your creativity, and your voice in this field. To all the students who are uncertain about their future: take your time, explore, and never stop learning. Sometimes, the best decisions are the unexpected ones.
